Portable Play Jars

Portable Play Jars is a concept influenced by a culmination of learning theories. Simply explained, they provide an aesthetically organised and contained learning experience where children are able to decide how and what they want to play with whilst learning the respect and responsibility of returning the resource in the jar complete as they found it for others to use. The sturdy jars are easily transported to their chosen place of play and contain only one type of resource. Portable Play Jars are ideal when stored aesthetically on display and accessible to children at all times.

Wooden Cylinder Froebel Puzzle

* 137104 In Portable Play Jar 12pcs $34.95

In spite of the name, it is not a true drum but an idiophone, usually carved or constructed from bamboo or wood into a box with one or more slits in the top. Most slit drums have one slit, though two and three slits (cut into the shape of an "H") occur. If the resultant tongues are different width or thicknesses, the drum will produce two different pitches. It is used throughout Africa, Asia and Oceania. In Africa such drums, strategically situated for optimal acoustic transmission (e.g., along a river or valley), have been used for long-distance communication.

Australian Indigenous Flags

The Aboriginal Flag
This flag was designed by Harold Thomas, an Arrernte man. The black is often said to represent the Aboriginal people, the yellow the sun (giver of life) and the red the earthland and ochre that is used for ceremony. On 14 July 1995 the flag gained official recognition as the flag of the Aboriginal peoples of Australia and a flag of significance to the Australian nation generally.

Torres Strait Islander Flag
This flag was designed by Bernard Namok from Thursday Island. The green is usually said to represent the land, the blue the sea, the black line and the white dhari (daree) head dress for the people, and the five-pointed star the five island groups. The flag was 'launched' on 29 May 1992 during a Torres Strait Islands cultural festival and received official recognition in July 1995.

Tuzzles Puzzles

All Tuzzles Puzzles are safety tested by an authorised international testing facility. Large Easy Grip & Knob/Peg puzzles are tested for 18 months +. All other puzzles are tested for 3 years plus to international safety standards. However, content, piece counts and a child's development may determine targeted age usage. This should be at the discretion of the educator.

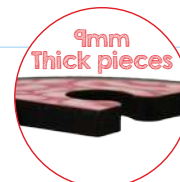

Puzzles help children develop a range of skills including visual motor skills, proprioception, vestibular, tactile and fine & gross motor. These are all pre-reading essentials and are extremely important in early childhood development.

Consider a successful outcome of achievement as the most important factor when choosing puzzles as children will stay focused and engaged to then attempt more complex puzzles.

Puzzle Complexity Guide:

- 1 Giant Easy Grip Puzzles: These are the first introduction to puzzles provide easy piece manipulation for younger children, or children needing assistance with coordination and fine-motor control.
- 2 Peg Puzzles: Play a vital role in the development of logical thought, gross and fine motor skills, the understanding of shape and positive and negative space. Starting with one piece peg puzzles and working through to whole picture pegs.
- 3 Starter Puzzles: Next step after single piece Pegs and are the beginning of a child's ability to "see" positive and negative shapes in a more complex form.
- 4 Raised Puzzles: Raised Puzzles sit-up in the tray above the background. This allows small fingers to easily manipulate the pieces – extending fine motor development.
- 5 Tray Puzzles: These puzzles are available in many sizes and piece counts. The tray helps to contain the pieces and gives the child a border within to work. There are many degrees of difficulty within the ranges of puzzles. Subject matter and the child's developing abilities determine the puzzles selected, however, a successful outcome of achievement should be considered most important when choosing the piece count.
- 6 Table Puzzles: Feature pieces which are chunky and easy to manipulate. The puzzles easily fit onto a table top and make great group activities. No borders and freeform shapes give the child different learning experiences. Table Puzzles help develop verbal communication and interaction with other children.
- 7 Layered Puzzles: Puzzles with more than one layer have more than one objective. The multiple layers will increase the difficulty of the task and allow children to understand more than one angle of the concept being taught.
- 8 Floor Puzzles: When piecing together a Floor Puzzle children need to maintain balance, stretch and move to complete the picture. The large chunky pieces make it easier for children to assemble the large puzzles on the floor. Floor Puzzles are fantastic group activities. Children interact as they search for the right pieces. Floor Puzzles help with fine and gross motor development, balance, proprioception, communication and help with many important developmental skills.
